Dan Costa
PCMag Editor in Chief

Dan Costa is the Editor-in-Chief of PCMag.com and the Senior Vice President of Content for Ziff-Davis. He oversees the editorial operations for PCMag.com, Geek.com, ExtremeTech.com as well as PCMag's network of blogs, including AppScout and SecurityWatch. Mr. Costa makes frequent appearances on local, national, and international news programs, including CNN, MSNBC, FOX, ABC, and NBC where he shares his perspective on a variety of technology trends. Mr. Costa holds degrees in magazine Journalism (BS) and Political Science (BA) from Syracuse University. He should be considered for traveling/virtual platforms.

The personal computing revolution has left the desktop and is now embedded directly into our homes. From protecting you home from intruders to knowing whether or not you need to buy eggs on the way home, connected technologies are changing the way we live. PCMag Editor in Chief Dan Costa will talk about some of the products he has tested in his Lab, and what the smart home of the future will look like.
